The investment team also includes Anil Ramjee who is a dedicated global REIT analyst.

MARKET REVIEW

This month Global REITs (FTSE/EPRA developed renters index) closed 0.94% in the red, again underperforming Equities as the S&P500 closed 2.33% higher while the European Stoxx 600 closed 59bps in the green. US 10-year bond yields closed only 5bps higher at 2.38% despite rising to 2.46% intra-month.

In line with the hawkish guidance statement in September, the UK Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) voted 7-2 for the first UK interest rate hike since 2007. In his guidance, Mark Carney stated that inflation was likely to breach the 2% target in the short term but due to lower demand, it would fall back below the target in the medium term. Forward guidance implies a very gradual, data dependent process to hiking rates where Brexit risks remain.

The US economy unexpectedly continued on a strong growth path in the third quarter. The economy grew at 3.0% q/q in spite of fears of a slowdown because of hurricanes Harvey and Irma. The economy added 261 000 jobs in October which was about 53 000 jobs less than expected but, due to lower labour participation, the unemployment rate unexpectedly dropped to 4.1% from 4.2%. Importantly, average hourly earnings grew at 2.4% y/y, lower than the market anticipated growth rate of 2.7%.

The Fed held its penultimate FOMC meeting at the end of October and as expected kept rates unchanged. However, the strong momentum of the US economy coupled with the rebound in employment in October reaffirms our assumption that the Fed will increase interest rates at the next FOMC meeting scheduled to take place on 12-13 December. Jay Powell was nominated this week to replace Janet Yellen as the new Fed Chair once her term expires on 3 February 2018. Jay has been a board Governor since 2012 and supported gradual increases in the federal funds rate, the normalization of the Fed's balance sheet, and current floor system of administered rates with elevated reserve balances. Therefore, in many ways, Powell is a new face to the public but many of the current policies are likely to continue.

US REITs reported Q3 earnings and the results scorecard points to a slight slowdown in earnings momentum with less companies beating forecasts or raising guidance. That being said 5-7% FFO growth still seems a reasonable growth expectation over the next 2-3 years. Global REITs trade at a 4.4% forward yield in USD, a 245bps spread to 10 year government bonds and 8% discount to NAV. We see value at these levels and would be comfortable forecasting 7-9% USD total returns over 12 months.
