The policy is to invest in JSE listed Real Estate Investment Trusts ("REITs") or listed property companies. The investment manager will also be allowed to invest in financial instruments and cash as allowed by the act from time to time in order to achieve its investment objective. - Through extensive experience in the listed property sector, we believe our team has the ability to identify the key differentiators to performance and ultimately the factors that impact total returns for clients. Importantly, given our commitment to capping the total size of assets under management we will remain nimble enough to execute on investment ideas effectively over the medium to long term.

MARKET REVIEW

The All Property Index ('ALPI') delivered a total return of +2.2% for the month of November, trailing equities for the month as 'the re-opening trade' gathered momentum to help generate a strong +4.5% monthly return; however equities still trail property for the year at +23.3% behind the ALPI at +28.1%. The very same macro trade saw inflation expectations rise and with it bond yields; bonds therefore underperformed for the month (+0.7%) and lag the other sectors materially for the year (+5.6%).

Local municipal elections came and went without too much concern. Ultimately voters expressed their displeasure with the ruling party (as well as the DA), which President Ramaphosa rightfully took as a sign to clean up the party and focus on delivery. There was a concern that the poor showing may put pressure on the President's position within his party, however the few dissenting voices were whispers at best. November was dominated by major macroeconomic trends. Markets started off on the front foot as global growth and inflation seemed to be more than transitory. This was echoed by the newly re-elected, US Federal Reserve Chairman's stance of tapering quantitative easing at an accelerated pace. Risk assets were rallying as bonds lagged. After the early bounce in the market, prices plateaued briefly, until the release of South Africa's findings that there was a new Covid variant of interest which commands further research. Omicron was likely responsible for the surge in cases observed across Gauteng, albeit off a very low base. The headlines caused market panic in regard to the global economic correction, and specifically to South Africa as a source of the virus, resulting in South Africa being isolated by much of the developed world through travel bans.

Company news was abundant and reasonably positive. Balance sheet repair continued with asset disposals, capital raising and earnings retention, and was further assisted by asset valuation declines slowing down drastically. Office still remains a concern as businesses are still in limbo as to their long-term office requirements coupled with a still fragile economy. Retail and logistic assets are showing their resilience and surprised to the upside across the board. Notable corporate events included the initial proposal by Redefine to acquire control of the highly indebted EPP and the sale of Hammerson's Silverburn Mall in Scotland, which gives them much needed respite on their balance sheet (despite more being needed).

Recent company results and guidance (albeit limited guidance) has led us to believe that our recent outlook may have been too pessimistic. We were previously of the view that the market had entered overbought territory as the recovery was underestimating the operations on the ground. Recent performances have proved us wrong and while we don't necessarily excessive returns, we do believe the sector is fairly valued, with several stock offering attractive total return profiles.
